This boy looks like he's got some basset hound in him with those dopey, droopy eyes. Well probably not in reality, but one can dream of a Cane Corso/Basset Hound hybrid, right? Big man Henry (24836497) was found as a stray and now we're trying to find him a home. Medically he checked out pretty darn well for a big breed at 7 years, weighing a solid 95 pounds. The only things our staff noticed was some blood in his stool (which he is on medication for), and that his super cute droopy eyes might technically be cherry eye. Henry was a super gentlemen when we took him out, posing for the camera with ease and even showing his manners by sitting for treats! This man obviously has home experience so let him live rest out of his years as the giant lapdog of your dreams!

This is just one of the many wonderful dogs in urgent need of adoption, foster care, or rescue at Philadelphia's animal control shelter, ACCT. You can stop down and meet them, and after filling out an application with shelter staff, interact with them 365 days a year at the shelter- 111 W. Hunting Park Avenue in Philadelphia. Please check www.acctphilly.org for hours.
