My wife and I bought this setup used. We got it for our daughter but we never ended up using it because it was a bit too big for our girl's bedroom. They share a room and there's not enough space for 2 beds. I did finally set it up last night in order to take the pictures attached. Overall it went together fairly easily and it was very sturdy. There are a few chips in the finish in random spots but it functions correctly. The gate is easy to drop and raise from the outside and the mattress is stain free. The bottom drawer is missing though as well as a few threaded inserts that the bolts fasten into. Replacements can be found at Lowe's for around $5 though. Everything else is there.

It converts to "grow" with your baby. Here's a description that i found online of the exact same model number.....

"The Storkcraft Aspen Stages Crib with drawer is a beautiful crib designed with classic sleigh lines. By converting to a daybed and, with headboard and footboard, to a full-size bed, it grows with your child. In a handsome cherry finish.

Storkcraft Aspen Stages Crib With Drawer, Cherry

It converts to a daybed. Convert the Storkcraft Aspen Stages Crib with drawer includes a headboard and footboard to convert to a daybed (included rails not included)

Meets or exceeds U.S. and Canadian standards Model No. 04388-324 by Storkcraft Baby.

I went for $300-$330 new. I'm asking $60 or best offer. It is disassembled now and ready for a new home. I saved the hardware too.

Contact me quick if interested! I am tempted to salvage the Cherry to use in the woodshop!
