I'm looking for a roommate for my super sweet second-floor 2BR/1BA apartment on Maple St. The apartment has a living room that gets great light, a dining room, an awesome giant screened-in porch, and a decently large kitchen with a gas stove (it's old and temperamental though, so y'know, don't get too amped). No dishwasher, but I'm great about staying on top of my dishes--hopefully you are too. The bathroom has a tub. In the winter you can see the lake clearly from some of the windows. I honestly can't remember how visible it was in the summer but it's pretty either way. The available room has three windows, a small closet and enough space for a queen bed and a dresser, but it's not huge. It's cozy! It actually is though. I'm not just saying that. There is coin-op laundry in the building. There isn't a yard (sad, I know, but we could try to grow plants together on the back porch if you're interested in that! I'm going to). Rent is $680, and heat is included. Gas/electric and internet aren't included, and we'd share them. That's about $100/month/person usually. Maybe a little less. Security deposit would be one month's rent.

I'm a 27-year-old woman and am a graduate student studying environmental science at UVM. I'm into social justice and music and art and romping around outside. I have a cat, so you'd have to be okay with cats (ideally you'd actually like them). We can't have any other pets, unfortunately. I'm looking for a person who's clean/respectful of common spaces, ideally would be happy sharing food, and is into having people over from time to time. I'm pretty busy so I won't be around the apartment alllll the time, but would love to have a roommate who likes to hang out. Queer-friendly is a must.

If this sounds like it might be a good place for you, shoot me an email! Tell me a little bit about yourself

(what are you up to in Burlington? what do you like to do with your free time? answers to other questions like "what are you up to in Burlington?" and "what do you like to do with your free time?")
