Hello! This is Pixie. I believe she is a Pitbull/Boxer mix. She probably weighs between 40-50 lbs and is what I would call a pocket pittie which is how we came to call her Pixie :-)

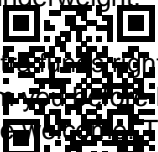

She was dumped on our property recently and we need to find her a good home. She is a good-natured girl but she doesn't get along with my alpha female dog and also chases the cats and chickens. We've had her living inside and she has proven to be house-broken but we don't have a kennel that will hold her. She pulls at the wire panels until they come loose and she escapes. She hasn't been destructive in my home and has not chewed anything she shouldn't have. She likes chew toys and rawhides quite a lot. We really don't know that much about her so I can't say for sure what she would be like once she was comfortable in a home of her own, although I do think she would be fine.

We're not going to put her out to fend for herself but she's difficult to take care of when she has disagreements with one of my dogs and can't be trusted alone with the cats.

If you are interested please email me and give me some info about yourself, your household, and the kind of life you would provide for her. She would be very grateful for a home of her own and would make a fantastic companion dog for someone who wants a good fur buddy. She's very lovable!

I don't know her status on vetting or if she's been spayed but my guess is she probably needs shots and I couldn't find a tattoo on her belly so she probably needs to be spayed also. She seems very healthy though and is not underweight.

 I am not the expert but right now I've adopted some other responsible pet at and I will accept her if you will. I will also require a good vet prior to her getting any other pet. Thank!
