We got these darlings a few weeks ago and while we love them our other dog does not. He is too rough with them and I am afraid he will end up hurting them unintentionally. They are brother and sister. They were born July 25th of this year. Asking a rehoming fee of $200 each or I will negotiate if you take both. I would prefer them to stay together if possible. They are both very tiny. We were told that their parents were also very tiny so I don't see them very big at all. They will stay tiny.

Flash - the brown puppy is the brother. He is slightly bigger than his sister. His coat is a really beautiful color. It's like milk chocolate. He is a timid little guy and if he gets stressed out he drools. Doesn't freak out or get aggressive. Just drools. He loves to snuggle up in your lap where he feels safe and warm and isn't much for the car. If you move him around a lot (like move him from lap to lap to lap while watching a show) he will start to grumble at you because he doesn't like to be jostled a lot. This is pretty common for small dogs. He loves to play with his sister and with others. We have young children and he plays well with them too.

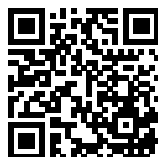

Tuesday - the cream puppy is the sister. This girl is tiny. She is the alpha dog in our home right now. She knows what she wants and she means to have it. If you sit on the couch she will push and wiggle her way into your lap in no time. She can be nervous meeting new people but warms up quickly. She likes to play with her brother and my kids. She is a gorgeous little girl, her coloring is really beautiful.

They haven't had their shots as of yet. We haven't yet found a veterinarian. They are eating the grain that I bought from Costco. I do digest the stuff that we buy from Costco. They are eating around the house. I have a dog named Flash, as I said before the young brother and they are getting along well. They are playing with my other dog when he comes out though with me they are just great loving, warm, sweet little puppies. I'm really sad to see them go but I don't want to see them go. If you have any questions please feel free to ask. They are quite obviously pure breed but are not papered. I don't know if the parents were or not. We live in the Idaho City area but can meet in Boise or somewhere near.
